Supportive Communication

The 4 attributes of supportive communication:

1) Descriptive, not evaluative—Focus on describing an objective occurrence, your reaction to it, and offering a suggested alternative. Example: “Here is what happened, here is my reaction; here is a suggestion that would be more acceptable.” Versus: “You are wrong for doing what you did.”

2) Problem-Oriented, not person-oriented—Focus on problems and issues that can be changed rather than people and their characteristics. Example: “How can we solve this problem?” Versus: “You caused this problem.”

3) Validating, not invalidating—Focus on statements that communicate respect, flexibility, collaboration, and areas of agreement. Example: “I have some ideas, do you have any suggestions?” Versus: “You wouldn’t understand, so it is best to do it my way.”

4) Conjunctive, not disjunctive—Focus on statements that flow from what has been said previously and facilitate interaction. Example: “I’d like to raise a point relating to what you just said.” Versus: “Here are my points...”
